International Magazine for the confectionery and snack business

SHORT PROFILE

For 58 years now, the SG Magazine has been the opinion-forming body of the confectionery branch in the German-speaking countries, in Europe and beyond. From the outset, the international confectionery trade association, which dates back to 1920, has informed its members through regular publications. Over the past decades, SG Magazine has evolved from just a confectionery-wholesale "SG Newspaper" for the members of the association to the internationally recognized trade magazine that spots all the needs and events in the confectionery sector. In addition to current news and company portrayals, the magazine covers sales and marketing as well as presentation of confectionery at the POS. Today, the news and information about the national and international confectionery branch are widely read by all those responsible for purchasing, marketing and sales in trade and production.

The SG Magazine is available as a print version as well as an app and online as an e-paper. Today, the news and information about the national and international confectionery sector is widely read by those responsible for purchasing, marketing and sales in trade and production. The readership of the SG Magazine is steadily growing both at home and abroad as a result of the increasing range of topics and news published in German and English languages. The SG Magazine is currently being shipped to subscribers in more than 60 countries. In addition to the readers in the German-speaking countries, who make up the larger part of the subscribers, many managers and decision makers of the confectionery sector in neighbouring countries, for example in Italy, Spain, Great Britain, the Benelux countries as well as the Scandinavian countries and increasingly in Central and Eastern Europe, take the magazine as a central specialized edition. In non-European countries many managers in the confectionery world also receive the SG Magazine.

The SG Magazine is highly appreciated by the owners and executives of the national and international confectionery producers as well as by the high-positioned managers in international import and distribution companies. Numerous buyers, marketing and sales managers of confectionery wholesale and retail trade as well as some department stores, trade chains of the LEH and the C + C companies connected with confectionery, also belong to the readers of the SG Magazine. However, not only confectionery manufacturers and suppliers benefit from the profound and carefully researched information. Manufacturers of packaging and POS materials, trading and marketing agencies as well as wholesalers and service companies of all kinds also use the comprehensive information about various aspects of the confectionery sector. The SG Magazine spotlights the main issues in chocolate, sugar confectionery, fine bakery, salty snacks and ice cream segments. It focuses primarily on trend and market reports, company portrayals, presentation of new products and promotions. The most important trade fairs and exhibitions are also in the sights of the magazine. The range of topics covers all aspects of the value-added chain beginning with the finished product, especially concerning marketing, sales and presentation at the POS. Such categories as management, CRM, online marketing and social media, market observation and current trends at the POS are as much in the magazine's area as the import and export of products and brands of the international confectionery business. The confectionery retail in Germany and abroad is a central focus of the SG Magazine.
